Is This Copyright Infringement? International Email Hosting Company Asks You to be the Judge

(Flushing, NY) – Swishmail.com, an Email Hosting Solution provider for enterprises around the world, cries foul play in regards to an alleged copyright infringement by Fazter.com, a subsidiary of Entergroup.com.

“I’m flattered and disturbed at the same time,” says Andrew Lian, Swishmail’s Senior VP of Marketing and Sales. “I’m flattered that our competitor, Entergroup.com, created Fazter.com as an almost exact imitation of Swishmail’s services, and that out of all the hosting providers out there, they chose to replicate us. I never thought we were so trendy,” he adds.

Lian is disturbed, however, because copyright infringement is a crime. “I’m disturbed that Entergroup.com would ignore copyright laws and proceed with such a devious act,” says Lian. “I mean, ‘Hello?’ If you’re going to cheat, don’t get caught,” he advises.

Lian also reports that Entergroup.com also purchased keywords from search engines such as Overture, 7 search, Sprinks, Google and others. When a browser typed in “Swishmail,” they were presented with Entergroup’s website. Lian contacted the search engines, which were more than helpful in removing the hold that Entergroup had on Swishmail’s keywords. “We’re grateful that all the search engines took immediate action,” says Lian.

But as of this writing, the copyright infringement remains. Lian asks the public to view both sites, and see for themselves, by visiting www.swishmail.com/webhosting1.php and www.fazter.com/hosting/package_1.fegml. “I ask the public to make the comparison. You be the judge,” says Lian.

Copyright infringements by Entergroup may also be found on Fazter’s Acceptable Use Policy, Corporate Overview, and 30 day money back guarantee. “Yes, every hosting provider has those pages, but not word for word,” says Lian.

And in case the offending material has been taken of from the site, comparisons may be made from the table below. For more information about action Swishmail plans to take, contact Andrew Lian at PR@swishmail.com.
